Great, April 13 at 2pm works for us. Our event planner has a few logistical questions too:

How long is the actual tour?
Where should our attendees park?
Where do we direct them to go to board the boat?

We're planning a reception afterward (instead of a lunch beforehand) and you and your staff are invited to attend of course, as we may have our presentations in there. I will keep you posted.

Thanks,

Mike,

Here's the last e-mail that I received from David:

Hi Augie,
I have a better idea of what my group was looking for: They actually do want to do a boat tour. They are interested in specifically the properties that are visible from the water starting at the fire station/maritime museum all the way out to the breakwater. Even for those properties which are not available for investment or are POLA sites, our group wants to know what is happening on these sites, especially the sites where there is no business or maritime activity? Even things the timeline for ports o call redevelopment, the fish market, etc. Is that sort of thing doable from the boat? Could someone from POLA or the Council Office be a speaker on those topics?
